

Response to questions concerning 2019 All State Points System.

Q1. Can a second team or additional individuals in an invitational tournament also earn All State Points.

A. No. Only the first competing team for a school in an invitational may earn all state points for that event. This is done in keeping with the traditional scoring for all state points.

As for team points to qualify for the All State Elite Tournament in September, only one team in an event may earn points in that invitational.

Q2. Can a team earn points in two different events in the same day, and could an individual earn points in a separate event from one the school's team is competing in on that day?

A. Yes. If a school has two teams competing in separate events on the same date, each team may earn all state points towards qualifying for the All State Elite team tournament.

In addition, if a school has an individual playing in a separate tournament from the team on the same date, that individual may also earn All State Points in that tournament.

Q3. If a school has separated into two teams, and both earn points to qualify towards the All State Elite tournament, will that school be allowed to enter both teams in the tournament?

A. No. Only one team per school will be permitted to enter the All State Elite Tournament. And a reminder, just as with individuals, a team may only use points for seven (7) total events towards qualifying by September 14, 2019.

Q4. Will a team be able to qualify both at team and separate individuals for the All State Elite tournament?

A. No. As with Q3, only one team, or individuals on a non-qualifying team, will be permitted to enter the All State Elite tournament. This is also in keeping with the tradition of postseason play used in Kentucky. A school may enter only a team, or individuals for this event.
